Don't Let Heat Get You . . . .

fice cooling devices-fans and air conditioners-Sedalians still have to adapt themselves to the discomforts of heat on the street and in areas not blessed. with breeze-wafters.

This summer the heat is in no wise as extreme as last year. Sedalia has always had variety-winter or summer. and it usually conforms to the cycles of the late 90's or early 1900's.

Complaints about the heat follow the same phraseology - no different than when grandmother sat on the porch in the wicker rocker waving a palm leaf fan to dry her perspiring brow, or walked all the way downtown grasping a 'sun-brella.'

Then, as today, one of the best ways to beat the heat was to resist the temptation to be chronically disagreeable. Somehow the latter condition only contributes to heat discomfort.

fret over the heat but when the boss breaks out in a rash these days-maybe he needs a vacation.

More generally recognized today than

Despite all the modern home and of- in the past is the fact that the required vacation has some merit. The boss who fights off a vacation because he is "too busy to take one" is heading for trouble -with his health and with his associates. Usually it is the middle-aged man who breaks under pressure when he should be at his peak. He's never had time to vacation — then the heat gets him, or he becomes a walking Eden for a host of hungry germs.

General health must be protected by a placid frame of mind, periodic physical rest if vigor and enthusiasm is to be retained on the job.

The chronic grouch these days had best take an inventory and hike off on a vacation before old Sol finishes him off or his reflexes get so mixed up he lands in the hospital because he becomes inefficient, not only at the office, but behind the wheel of his motor car. Many accidents happen just that way.

If you're getting edgy at your work It's bad enoupgh for the employes to and because of the heat - take off, if you can. If you can't, then use a palm leaf fan. Grandmother found it a relieving device - but mostly because she was never disagreeable despite the heat.

Geneva Is Swarming With Secret Agents

for the greatest conglomeration of spies in recent European history. It always was a haven for spies, and it was here that Allen Dulles, now sometimes called the "chief spymaster of the USA," operated as head of the European OSS during the war. . . . Now that the Geneva conference is in full blast, secret agents have invaded this usually somnolent city equipped with the greatest collection of wire-tapping devices ever assembled in any one place. They beat anything Senator McCarthy ever dreamed of. . . . These long-distance listening devices are such that they can be placed near the Russian delegation or the villa occupied by Eisenhower, and thus agents can listen in on personal conversations by either Ike or Premeir Bulganin before either sits down with his opposite number. One device is so fantastic that it can pick up sound 200 yards away. . . . The agents operating these devices are both Russian and American, and it will be a miracle if either Eisenhower or Bulganin goes into conference with each other without knowing in advance exactly what the other man is thinking about.

Geneva-Go-Round

After this conference ends, the psychiatrists of the world will hold a meeting here. Geneva will need them. . . . Nikita Khrushchev's official Soviet biography says he began life as a shepherd. In Geneva he shepherded three top Russian delegates into a swank villa on the lake and a large coterie of Russian experts into the austere Hotel Metropole-with the help of several dozen austere bodyguards bulging around the middle. . . . The Russians brought their own limousines to Geneva - well-built jobs looking somewhat like J. Edgar Hoover's car with bulletproof windows. . . . The Russians immediately got wise, however, to tour Geneva in an open car with no bodyguards save Swiss motorcycle cops. Khrushchev made a smiling contrast to the stern-faced Secretary Dulles when he drove up, doffing his hat to the press at the opening session. Ike smiled cheerfully, but members of the European press commented on the eight bodyguards around him in contrast to no guards around Bulganin and Khrushchev. . Unfortunately Dulles has a paralyzed lower lip which won't permit him to smile no matter how rosy the diplomatic horizon. . . . The Swiss, a sophisticated people, take international conferences in their stride; they have seen so many of them that they are bored. But this one "at the summit" has them a bit worried and they are taking extra security precautions. Contingents of the Swiss army swell the Geneva police guard and help to handle traffic. All are efficient and courteous, with many of them speaking English. Intermixed are hundreds of Swiss counter espionage agents guarding the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Driver, Car and Road. Both Republicans and Democrats in Congress are said to be seeking the credit for putting across federal participation in a national highway-building program. What is delaying the matter, therefore, is not argument over whether there should be such a program, but over how it should be financed and whether the federal aid ought to be concentrated on interstate highways or distributed also among local roads.

Certainly the holiday just passed has underlined somberly the need for improved roads of both kinds. The human element doubtless is the most important in highway safety. Neither the power and speed built into modern automobiles generally nor the condition of the individual car can be disregarded. But to the kind of roads on which these automobiles travel must be assessed part of the blame for the fatality total of over 400 which set a new high mark for a July 4 holiday

For the accident rate varies startlingly between different types of roads - between the basic two lane, the multiple lane, and the divided lanes; between those troubled with intersecting and cross roads, and those of the so-called "limited access" variety. Statistics compiled thus far indicate that the accident rate for certain limited access, divided highways has been only one-half to one-fourth that for the older type of road.

Here is one factor in the highway safety equation which lends itself to engineering-and financial-solutions. Whichever road building program emerges from Congress should be a help toward highway safety.

GENEVA - Switzerland today is the base bodyguards who guard the dignataries. . .

The Swiss are very thourough people and they want no accidents to mar this conference. . . . Even so, they are polite. Photographers were given this invitation to submit their cameras to the police to see if any sawed-off machine guns were inside: "All cameramen wishing to take pictures at the Palace des Nations are invited to present their cameras to the police control."

Evangelist Billy Graham opened in Geneva one day before the conference began with a prayer for the success of the Big Four's ne-

Pope-Eisenhower Meeting Nixed

President Eisenhower has abandoned the idea of a dramatic meeting with Pope Pius at his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo near Eisenhower advisers had discussed the idea as a move to dramatize America's all-out search for an end to the cold war, and Eisenhower, tackled yet: German unity and a ing up the North Atlantic Treaty though not anxious to prolong his visit in Europe, was willing to go.

However, Secretary Dulles has poured cold water on the idea. He pointed out that if Eisen- President Eisenhower and the hower went to Rome he would of necessity be Prime Ministers of Britain (Eden), forced to call on new Italian Premier Segni. And France (Faure) and Russia (Bul-Dulles doesn't want to boost Segni's prestige.

Swiss Neutral, But Prepared

If there were a general mobilization in Europe tomorrow, the largest force ready for immediate action - for the first 36 hours - would be the Swiss. . . . Every ablebodied male between the ages of 18 and 45 is a reservist and puts in three weeks per year in the field.

Every man has his rifle and equipment ready at all times and military inspectors are empowered to enter his home to see if his rifle is kept cleaned, oiled and loaded. . . . Certain mountains have hollowed-out sections stocked with food and munitions and all strategic roads are protected by traps, mines and artillery. . . This country is neutral all right and bristling with a determination to stay neutral. . . . The Swiss don't like to be reminded, but the original reason for their neutrality was to export their mercenaries to the rest of the world.

Bohlen In Driver's Seat Ambassador "Chip" Bohlen, the man Joe Mc-

Carthy bitterly tried to defeat as U. S. ambassador to Russia, is in the driver's seat at Geneva. He occupies much the same position he did at Yalta as an adviser and interpreter, expert on Russian affairs. Eisenhower can't get along without him any more than Roosevelt and Acheson could. . . . Bohlen's advice generally is good. He's not as optimistic about Geneva results as Dulles is, but is more so than the U. S. military. Bohlen is the adviser who cautions not to say that the Russians are playing from weakness instead of strength, as Dulles told the Senate Relations Committee last month. This just makes 'em sore, says Bohlen. After all, they read the newspapers. . . . This being a conference at the summit, press relations are run not by Dulles' assistant secretary of state Carl McCardle but by astute White House press officer Jim Hagerty. Hagerty, incidentally, does not like McCardle, and would have had him fired long ago if he were not Dulles' personal ap-

Some of the business of the Republican convention in San Francisco next summer may be transacted in smoke-filled staterooms.

But they showed they are still so far apart on the bigggest issues that there is no reason to believe the foreign ministers will be any better able to reach agreements on those issues than they did before. And they didn't before. This is where the Big Four vaguely agreed on principles: Eisenhower suggested, "All curshould come down." Bulganin favored "lifting artificial barriers." Eden was for free exchange between peoples. Faure was for West-Russian exchange in economics, culture and informa-

Keeping Fingers Crossed On 'Peace' From Geneva

By Joseph A. Dear Democrat-Capital

Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON - Skeptics had no good chance to present their case against the Geneva conference before it began. Compulsion to criticism was somewhat counterbalanced by the commendable desire to rally round President Eisenhower on the eve of his departure. Then too, Senator Joe McCarthy's sudden sortie against the Administration

THE THREE-YEAR-old girl has an uncle whose name is Paul, so when her baby brother arrived he was named Paul for the uncle, well, the new baby might be Paul to the rest of the family but not to the little girl - to her he is "Uncle Paul" and that is what she always calls him. She has an uncle Gerald, too so the little boy she knows in Sunday School whose name is Gerald is naturally Uncle Gerald.

Geneva is that optimism is unjustified. The President himself has indicated that he hopes the conference will produce an atmosphere in which it will be possible to negotiate tension-easing agreements

Not too much is to be expected immediately. Take the issue of disarmament, for example. Nations will not stride toward this goal in seven league boots. Because, as the President has said, good faith on both sides is the essential pre - condition for any arms agreement. You must have faith in what your opponent says. And he must believe you.

Such harmony is not easily attained. Once the proper atmosphere is created, you negotiate on one or two items. Then, bit by bit, step by step, the world can move toward general agreement. In view of the Free World's wellfounded suspicions of the Communist bloc, this obviously will be a terribly slow process.

So slow, in fact, that the President's program can be criticized as unrealistic. At least insofar as it depends on establishing an atmosphere of harmony.

At the end of World War II. there was such an atmosphere. There was in the free world a Will the city officials guarantee reservoir of good will for the Soviet Union. Unless you accept the theory that Russia has changed its spots since the death of Stalin. Stalin was a bungler, in the opinion of many Russian experts. He blundered frightfully through sheer ignorance. For example, he could have torpedoed the Marshall Plan merely by accepting our invitation to participate. But he didn't. And so His successors, so the argument runs, are more worldly wise. They will avoid stupidities in working toward the still unchanged goals of Russian diplomacy. And the true goal of the Marxist is world domination.

Furthermore, Russia is stronger now. United States no longer has an atomic monopoly. The Soviet Union has drawn - or is drawing - abreast of us in air power. It is reported that the Soviet guided missle program is well advanced. With such power in hand, the Soviets can afford to sit back. The Communist bloc has reached the point where it could attain preponderance by political means alone.

In short, the dangers for the West are very real and are greater than ever. Nothing should be permitted to blur that picture. Not the conference at Geneva. Or the adventures of Russian farmers in Iowa. Or the pleasant reception accorded American weight lifters and chess players in Moscow. To be sure people everywhere hope for peace. But while it may be true that leaders of nations have an imperfect control over events, the people themselves often exercise even less control. This is a non-euclidian age, and where nations are involved the whole is only rarely equal to the sum of its parts. Thus integrating the hopes of all people by equation won't enable us to predict the -H. L. future with certainty.

GROTON, Conn. (A-The Navy, racing to keep supremacy over Russia in the means of undersea warfare, launches its second nuclear submarine, the Seawolf, today and lays the keel for a third. Eight atomic-powered subs have been authorized.

The first A-submarine, the Nautilus, was built here at the yads of the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp., where the Seawolf and the third boat are building. The Nautilus was commissioned six months ago and now has thousands of miles of operation, hundreds of dives and a long cruise to the Caribbean on her log.

Externally, the Seawolf will look much like the Nautilus, but with a somewhat sleeker hull. Official statistics on the Seawolf show her to be about 3,000 tons displacement 330 feet long, with a 27-foot beam.

Her underwater speed is stated in the same general manner as that for the Nautilus-"over 20 knots." Actual speed may range between 20 and 30 knots.

The Seawolf will carry a crew of about 100, including officers. The official cost estimate of the Seawolf's hull, minus the atomic power plant, is $32,700,000. The Nautilus is estimated unofficially to have cost about $57,000,000, including the atomic engine which accounted for about half the cost. Primary difference between the

Chemical Coin Dates

COLUMBUS, Ohio P -- Chemistry can date ancient Greek coins even when wear or corrosion make the dates on them illegible say Dr. Earle R. Caley and Wallace H. Deeble of Ohio State University.

Dr. Caley has charted system atic changes in lead and tin content of Greek bronze coins. Using his figures, a chemist can date a coin with a possible error of 25 years each way, he says. He began assembling his data when he operated chemical laboratory on the site of the Athens Agora during excavations in the late 30's.

Good care will make hosiery last much longer. Wash hose before they are ever worn and then after each wearing. Protect against snags by placing them in a nylon "swish" bag or jar or by wearing gloves. Store them in a padded box or plastic or fabric case.

Getting the proper size will also add to the life of hose. For adults, hose should be one-half to one inch longer than the foot. The well-fitted nylon is taut and smooth. This helps to keep the stocking snag and run free. It you have runs that start at the top, you probably need a longer length or you have too long a stocking. If your runs start from the toe, probably a longer foot size is needed. Hose are made up in all leg sizes - for short or slim legs, for average or medium legs, for long or full legs. This makes for better fit, longer life, and greater comfort. Harvest Potatoes Now

Potatoes are not near the end of their growing season. As a general rule, we find it advantageous to harvest the potatoes as soon as the tops turn yellow and begin to die. In this way we can avoid a considerable amount of injury by soil insects and avoid high temperature injury which sometimes occurs if the potatoes are left in the ground too long during the months of July and August, they do need a cover of The Missouri State Fair is rightfully called 'The Showplace of the Commonwealth." But it is much more than a showplace.

Agriculture provides the basis for a great percentage of Missouri's economy. Therefore the State Fair is an agricultural exhibition mixed with entertainment. It shows in true "Show-Me State" fashion what this great commonwealth can and does produce.

It is possible in a visit to the State Fair to learn more about Missouri, its fabulous wealth and producing potentialities, than could be learned elsewhere in years.

A distinct part of the State Department of Agriculture, the Missouri State Fair occupies 276 acres just outside Sedalia. More than 70 permanent buildings are located on the grounds, which are among the most beautiful of any major fair in the nation.

Grand Circuit harness racing brings to the Fair the finest trotting and pacing horses of the nation. The big car, stock car and motorcycle races attract the leading drivers of the United States.

The first Missouri State Fair was held in 1901. Since that time it has been held every year except two during World War H.

The State Fair is directed by L. C. Carpenter, Commissioner of Agriculture. Executive Secretary is Ross C. Ewing.

Missourians can be justly proud of their Fair, a valued customer of the Missouri Public Service Company.
